Yanki is affiliated with Faculty of Economics and Business, Universitas Indonesia. She earned MBA degree from University of the Philippines. She also obtained Master of Science and Doctorate in Industrial and Organizational Psychology from Universitas Indonesia. She gained early professional experience working in various industries as a human resources practitioner.

After 15 years in industry, she shifted into academia where she has contributed locally and internationally in teaching, supervision and examining master's and doctoral theses. She has also engaged actively in scientific and applied research and collaborated with colleagues in Indonesia and globally. Much of her work has been published and her peer reviewed outputs have been shared at international seminars and conferences, and in indexed journals, like Management Research Review and Polish Journal of Management Studies.

She has also been invited as a visiting professor to disseminate her research findings as a keynote speaker, panelist, or jury member in Asia and Europe, such as Asian Institute of Management (Manila, Philippines), Business School of Hanyang University (Seoul, South Korea), and Graduate School of Business Sciences, University of Tsukuba (Tokyo, Japan). She also serves on the editorial boards for several peer-reviewed academic journals from across the world, notably Management Research Review, Administrative Theory and Praxis, and Psychology Research and Behavior Management.

Dr. Yanki is a proactive scholar who serves on the committees of various international conference associations, aligned with her research and publications which focus on leadership and Asian business culture, human resource practices in Asian and Western countries, work behavior among multi-generational workforces, as well as sustainable tourism studies.

She has authored a book "Resilient in the Midst of a Pandemic: Learning from Bacteria" alongside her colleague, a microbiology professor. Another publication is a chapter on sustainable tourism management in the book "People, Planet, Profit: Principles and Practices of Sustainable Tourism" edited by professors from Asian Institute of Management-Dr. Andrew L. Tan Center for Tourism, Manila, Philippines.
